

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, August 26, 2018

Good Morning All,

I have spent a few evenings this week with my sketch pad on my lap simply doodling then I scanned some of the images into the computer so I could play around with them & have produced some interesting results, though haven't decided yet if those are worth uploading?

Image 1: I mentioned last weekend that I would probably bin a bunch of the paper collection sheets as they have been running for ages & I need a change. Well I don't know how many I actually binned but there are six left so I will be previewing a new collection in the newsletter next weekend.

Image 2: Another image from the second resource file I had forgotten about, another vintage Santa image but this time I avoided the usual decoupage & created a triptych & some mirrored pairs instead.

Image 3: I have spent more time this week working up decoupages in this format for you so there are a bundle of them on file for you now. This particular one features a school girl doing her homework, or she could just be writing a letter I guess?

Image 4: Something a bit different – I was messing about with various digital image enhancements & ended up with these faux heat embossed baubles, with no idea how I actually did it!

Images 5 & 6: More from the Vintage Office file now, but this time I added some colour!

So a decoupage sheet with some extra greeting banners/tags, plus a sheet of background paper with the image emblazoned on the bottom corner.

Images 7, 8 & 9: As I mentioned when I uploaded the previous set, here is the blueberry design that I created at the same time. S

So a layered decoupage on the first sheet & then two different but complimentary backing papers to use with it.

Image 10: The third in this little series of four intricate floral decoupages now, sadly I don't know the names of many flowers – my memory simply never did retain the names of things, even as a kid!

Image 11: I am gradually clearing out the rose file now as it has been going for months & months, so pretty card kit/decoupage topper sheet featuring this beautiful red rose.

Image 12: The bonus sheet for this morning is another sheet I created – having binned what I already had in the metallic file – of metallic stars that turned out really well.

I know I am in a metallic rut right now but I began coming out of it yesterday, sadly only to return to tone on tone cards, but it is a start – perhaps....?

Rita x