

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, 09 September 2018

Good Morning Everyone,

Sorry I have another bunched up newsletter for you today, but with tons of images that I need to preview here this morning, it simply can't be helped I am afraid.

Image 1: The current paper collection comes into its second week as of today, so another three weeks or so of that still to run. Just as well really as I haven't even begun work on the follow up yet!

Image 2: I am planning a bit of a 'robin' week in the coming seven days & used the same circular or oval format to create the style of decoupage that you seem to like.

So my first offering in this little threesome is this sweet little picture of a robin perched on a branch which is covered in the snow.

Image 3: My second is a different robin who appears to be watching something overhead.

Image 4: The third robin appears to be a much older image, but nonetheless cute for that.

Image 5: I mentioned I was doodling the other week, well I never got around to showing you this little bird I decided to scan into the computer & digitally colour.

He is nowhere near as handsome as the previous three images, but I think he has a certain charm regardless. So I created a pair of mirror imaged & layered toppers with my little robin doodle for you!

Image 6: A sheet of mono toppers from the Vintage office file, there is already so much colour going on in the newsletter this week I wanted something to tone it down with!

So I have matted up a bunch of images featuring old machines with flora around them & then it is up to you whether or not to colour them.

Image 7: Getting back to the oval or circular decoupages I have been working up for you, here a lovely image of a mum carrying her young child in one arm & supporting a parasol in the other.

I really spent some time on creating the decoupage for this one, so you will be needing your craft knife to hand to cut out at least one of the layers.

Images 8 & 9: Okay, as I only completed this yesterday morning but wanted to get it onto the website to refresh the templates page.

So image 8 is the finished example when I was done decorating it, whereas image 9 was the photo I took before I began decorating – in case I made a mess of that!

But I took a picture between the two which I haven't included here, once I had prepared the base I flipped it over & pencilled in all of the measurements on the back.

This saved me the effort of typing up a worksheet, as it is created from a 20cm (8") square card, so I couldn't design a template that you could print out on a standard printer.

Images 10 & 11: There are two bonus sheets this morning just to finish off the poinsettia stuff I was uploading last week. The first is a 'shiny in places' backing paper, if you recall I was trying to find a way to make the poinsettia shine so carried it forward to the backing paper.

The second bonus sheet is simply these mirror image oval toppers for you to add your own greeting, or anything else you choose.

Rita x