

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, October 14, 2018

Good morning everyone,

It seems to me that once the dark nights begin to close in we are suddenly freewheeling toward Christmas without the benefit of any brakes!

With a little over two months left now I await news from mums & dads on what to buy my great nephews & nieces for Christmas this year, so I can make a start.

Fortunately the eldest phoned me to tell me she had passed her eleven plus the other evening, so I was able to ask her to have a think about what she would like, & to ask her little sister too, sadly neither believe in the magic any longer.

Image 1: We are around half way through the current paper collection upload now, so still a couple of weeks to run on that.

Image 2: When I did the Christmas design set recently it inspired me to do this design sheet too, so there is a full image of the man himself, a cameo, a triptych, four little heart shaped images & a little card.

Image 3: The third of these paper quad sets now & as you can see this one features one of my favourite flowers, the poppy. So again I teamed two floral papers from other sets together with a polka dot & a striped paper to create the set of four.

Image 4: Something from the rose files now with this pretty rose cameo decoupage.

Image 5: There is a full print paper that also accompanies this particular rose, but I really like how the single rose background worked out.

Image 6: Another of those card kits using photographs of cake! I really had fun putting these together; it was just nice to work with a different image format for a change.

Image 7: Coming to the end of the Vintage Office file now with this sheet of embellishments in various sizes. Again I coloured in the roses around the machine & then used the computer, as I do when I am creating the paper collections, to manipulate the original colour.

Image 8: Another of those images that I deconstructed & then put a new background behind in order to centre the oval so I could go ahead & decoupage it.

This particular image was printed onto watercolour paper so has a wonderful textural look that I wish I could recreate on the computer to use on other images, but sadly I haven't figured out how to do that as yet!

Image 9: Another set of toppers that I extended the backgrounds on, this time in order to print the lyrics to Christmas carols alongside.

Image 10: The bonus sheet for today is the third sheet of extra's cut from the current paper collection, with this & the final one I chose to go for stamping panels rather than tags.

Rita x