

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, October 21, 2018

Good morning everyone,

The newsletter looks strangely bare this morning, but that is because there are no accompanying sheets to go with any of the designs this week.

I made it look less spaced out by moving stuff around a bit, but I don't want to get into a total revamp of the newsletter format or it will take all morning to get it published online!

Image 1: The final full week of the current paper collection coming up, there are actually eight sheets left so I may simply upload two one afternoon to get it finished before next weeks' newsletter.

Image 2: Not my usual style I know, but then we each have different tastes & although I almost binned this I decided to upload it anyhow as it is usually the one's I decide I don't like that turn out to be really popular, so we shall see?

So a 'modern art' style twist on a Christmas poinsettia that I created & then decouped for you, & then I threw in a couple of mirrored mini images for you to use on the back, insert or envelope – or to make another card of course!

Image 3: I was on a roll early week & got two new mini collections done, both of which I am launching this coming week. This first one features head dresses & I have created some decoupages, toppers & papers etc. This one has a decoupage set but also some mini mirror imaged ovals & just a hint of the background that I created to accompany the set.

Image 4: The other Christmas sheet in the line up for the coming week is this rather unusual format of two mirror image toppers with a sting of bells & a greeting to accompany each, which you can use together or separately.

Image 5: The final set in these paper quads for you now, not sure if I have a favourite in these sets are all feature at least one of my favourite flowers!

Image 6: The final sheet from the Vintage Office file is this topper design set where I have added some greeting panels, in case you want to use them. Well, why waste paper when I can add something to the design?

Image 7: I thought that I had uploaded all of the card kit designs from these cake images, but when I looked in the file there were a few more, as well as a couple of other formats.

So here I created a 'Happy Cupcake Day' card kit & then painstakingly decoupage it to within an inch of its life!

Image 8: The second of the new collections launching in the coming week is similar to the head dress set but featuring outfits. Here I cropped the set of three images from a larger sheet & then matted & layered them before creating the decoupage, & then I mirrored imaged it to give you much more scope to use them on fancy fold cards.

Again I added just a hint of one of the background sheets that I designed to accompany the set.

Image 9: The final stamping panel sheet that I cut from the current paper collection, I don't usually use scalloped edges on stuff as it makes it more difficult for you to cut out, but it just somehow 'looked right' with this particular set?

If you have scalloped circle dies you could see if any would work with the number of scallops, or simply use a slightly larger one & leave a white edge?

Okay, so those are my 'offerings' for the coming week & I hope that there is something amongst the mix to suit most crafty folks out there?

Catch up with you all this afternoon for the update as usual.

Rita x