Welcome to my world

Sunday, October 28, 2018

Good morning everyone,

It is wonderful to wake up in daylight again after several weeks of dark mornings at 7am, sadly it won't last long. Though if you forgot to turn the clocks back last night it would still have been dark then?

I have had a pretty busy week 'doing some making' as my younger great nephews & nieces call it, from new t shirts to cards. I also got some stuff ticked off the 'to do' list' & even had a shopping trip with my sister, niece & nephews partner.

The latter asked me to knit a wartime 'tank top' for her eldest as they are dressing up at school to commemorate, & texted the measurements last night. Just waiting to hear whether one of the yarn colours I have is suitable, or if she is going to drop off some other stuff.

The scarf I am knitting for myself will be finished in another few days, so I can get started on it then. My sister is a fantastic knitter but prefers to work from a pattern, whereas I prefer to design as I go, & ad lib is definitely called for here.

Image 1: The new paper collection that I will be launching early week is a simple affair, but perfect for this time of the year, I called it Starry Skies.

Image 2: the second of the head dress designs; this one is a mixed bunch of toppers & it was from here that I worked up some of the other sheets.

Image 3: The second of those projects I did the other week now, where I list all of the dies I use & the imperial equivalent to our metric. It turns out really pretty as you can see, so I hope you give it a try.

Image 4: I saw a die in a video that I thought would be so easy to make up as a template, so I worked up the design & then created two sizes, & the beauty of this is that you can make it any depth you want!

Image 5: The first of the Christmas sheets for the coming week is this simple set of card fronts where I have even added a greeting for you, so perfect for those last minute unexpected cards you need to respond to.

Image 6: Another card kit featuring cakes, this one is a lovely shade of pink so perfect for female cards.

Image 7: The other Christmas sheet for the coming week is this duo decoupage Nativity sheet, where I have added extra images for you to use on the back of the card, the insert or on the envelope.

Image 8: The second from the Outfit file now, so a duo mirrored & layered topper with just a hint of a background which accompanies the series.

Image 9: I mentioned I had spent a whole day working up calendar bases recently, well in case you were wondering what I meant I thought I would upload this as the bonus sheet for today, so you can see.

First of all I have to create the calendar in a work sheet as it is the fastest way, that way I have control of the font & text size etc.

Then I have to create the layout I want before adding in the days, dates & month titles. As you can imagine that takes concentration & time, but once it is done I can now use it in any way & on anything I want.

I repeated this with the list layout; you know the vertical version that leaves room for notes? So that is also complete so I plan on having a play with both in the coming week so I can produce some calendars for you for the coming year.

Okay I am done. Catch up with you again once I get the weekend housework out of the way.
