

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, November 25, 2018

Good Morning,

I just had a lovely thought , sitting here at 7.15am on a Sunday morning & it still being dark outside, in less than a month from now our days will begin getting longer again - yippee!!!!

I got quite a bit of the weekend housework done yesterday & so I have loads of time to make today Postie Bob's Millionaires shortbread, & also to wrap up some of the Christmas gifts.

I even had the beginnings of an idea last night, about little individual handmade gifts for the girls at the dentist, so I may explore that later too?

Image 1: I uploaded the final two sheets of the current paper collection to site yesterday so I could preview this new one this morning & I have dubbed this the Honeycomb collection.

Image 2: A really sweet image of Santa filling Christmas stockings, which I simply added a backing mat to & then decoupage, ready for you to layer up in 3D on your cards.

Image 3: Here a sheet of card toppers from the costumes file, there are six in all & I have simply added them to slightly deeper tone mats to highlight them a bit more, so they will stand out better on top of ...

Image 4: ...one of the backing papers that accompany this costume series, I designed it to work with most of the sheets from that file.

Image 5: The final sheet that I created from photographs of cakes now, this one has a polka dot back panel & then lots of layers, so you could use the whole thing on a single card or split it up over two.

Images 6 & 7: Another duo from the head dress file, the first sheet includes a layered topper as well as two pairs of mirror images cameo shaped toppers. This is accompanied by the backing paper I constructed using only the image itself.

Image 8: Another of these oval format decoupages that you seem to like, here a couple of young girls out walking, maybe on their way to school perhaps? I have also included a couple of mini mirrored images for you to use elsewhere on your project.

Image 9: As I am aware how much you like them I am throwing in a second of the oval format decoupages for you this week, this one features a couple of girls playing outdoors.

Image 10: I was messing around the other morning filling a mono image with colour, digitally of course, & ended up with a bunch of different coloured images.

I was going to discard them initially but then thought you might like them so added a ticket shaped panel to the back & layered that up with a coloured panel to match the colour I had chosen to use on the number.

Image 11: Then I thought I might as well carry on & make a background paper to match, so I shrunk down the 'tickets' & lined them up & used them in alternating rows to create the sheet.

Image 12: Then I went on to create another backing sheet, without the ticket shaped layering, & I really liked how this turned out, so decided to use it as the bonus sheet for this morning.

Catch up with you all again later for the usual update.

Rita x