

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, December 9, 2018

Good morning everyone,

I just couldn't resist last night & came back to play with the shaker mixes when I remembered that I had some tiny faux pearls in my beading stash that would work with some of them, so another vacuum later & I was all done!

It did occur to me check out the price of shaker mixes online afterward & was rather pleased to discover that I had saved myself an absolute fortune by making them up myself!

I bought another couple of pick up tools online last week & they arrived yesterday, I have tried the one with the sticky end, the white pencil & the end of a piece of dried spaghetti, but all leave a lot to be desired.

Both tools arrived yesterday so I was having a play with them last night & the wax pencil seems to work pretty well with sequins, but not so much with gems. The version with the retractable claws seems to fare better; I just need to practice the technique.

Anyhow, enough waffling & time to get down to business:

Image 1: The third week of the current paper collection coming up, & to be honest I will be happy to get to the end as I have now completed a new one that I rather like!

Image 2: A traditional Santa decoupage, though I am pretty sure I have used this image previously & am almost certain I decoupage it then too, so if I did you have my apologies!

two pairs of mirror image cameos, & the second sheet is the background to match - I just loved the colours in this image! These are the final sheets from the head dress file.

Image 6: Several sets of mirror image cameo toppers/embellishments featuring the Christmas bird by himself for you now, & so opens up the opportunity for you to play round with fancy fold cards.

Image 7: The first of two oval/circular decoupages I have planned for you in the coming week, this first one is a beautiful image of a child feeding the birds.

I have also included a couple of tiny mirror image cameos to use elsewhere on your project.

Image 8: This second one again features children; a couple of kids trying to figure out how to climb the wall reach the orchard, I also added a couple of mini mirrored images to the sheet as there was space. Again I found space on the sheet to include two mini mirror images.

Image 9: There are only two sheets left in the costume file so I decided to upload both, this first one is the last in the series of mirrored toppers.

Image 10: The one I chose to use as the bonus sheet this morning is also from that file, but a full decoupage rather than toppers.

I really need to dig into the archives to check what I have done in previous years!

Image 3: My penguin & the Christmas bird together & obviously I used some digital trickery to shrink the bird down to fit onto the penguin's flipper, but it made for a lovely focal point for these mirrored toppers.

Images 4 & 5: The two sheet set that I mentioned last week from the head dress file; the first sheet has a complete decoupage as well as

So another file that I have been able to delete as I have several other files which I will run as mini-series ready to begin uploading, now that the head dress & outfit files are complete.

Catch up with you all again this afternoon for the usual update.

Rita x