

The Paper Craft Tutor.com

Welcome to my world

Sunday, July 21, 2019

Good morning to you all,

With the new hammock now residing in the back garden I am really looking forward to the mini heat wave we are supposed to be getting in the week. Last year I made loads of macramé hanging baskets while outdoors in the sunshine, though now sure what I will end up doing this summer as yet.

Image 1: The current Zig Zags paper collection has just completed the first week so a few more weeks to run with that yet.

Image 2: The partner to the sheet I uploaded last week where I created a frame from an image of an embroidery hoop. Again I used this to frame some vintage floral images as they just seemed to work so well & turned out so pretty.

Image 3: The first of two templates that I am planning to upload in the coming week, this one is a tote & box in one, which I designed specifically to hold a tube of lip balm. They are super simple to make & so you could knock up a whole bunch of them in an evening & sell them at your craft fairs this autumn.

Image 4: The first of the two framed Santa card kits I have lined up, again there are ten in all to collect & they are all identical apart from the actual Santa image.

Image 5: The final sheet from the George Barbier file for you now; these last few original decoupage format sheets were actually the first one's I designed, before swapping back to the oval decoupage format for all of the others.

Image 6: The seventh sheet in this series inspired by these stunning depictions of birds, & because I know how much you like the oval decoupage format that I have been designing for a while now, I have done the whole series of twenty in that style.

Image 7: The second of these gold framed Santa card kits for the coming week, if I had any more good quality Santa images I would have carried on, but I guess a series of ten is more than enough anyhow, hu?

Image 8: The second of the two templates I have planned for the coming week; this pretty little box holds three eight hour burn scented tea lights so is made from a card base which I then decorated with pretty paper. Then I used one of my dies to cut out the ornate belly band, just as a bit of a change to the usual matching paper one.

I have had so much fun coming up with all of these boxes, & although I have had to quit doing them as I simply don't have any more space to store them the vast majority are in template format & still in the file, ready to upload for you, & as I generally do with the templates, I have converted all of them to print out on letter sized paper for my American readers.

Image 9: The official bonus sheet for this morning is this sheet of framed vintage posters, which I think I created a pair of so must have uploaded the other already? But as has become my habit of late I have a few other design sheets that I am planning on uploading directly to their relevant pages this morning.

The new 'Daily Upload' page has received so little comment that I am planning on adopting it permanently as it makes things a lot easier for me when I don't have to try to come up with a load of chit chat, when I really haven't done anything other than designing or crafting all day!

Rita x